DISCUSSION QUESTION:

Note to Student: Sometimes psychological chains are as strong as or stronger than physical ones. It's easy to form judgements and opinions when you haven't been educated on an issue like human trafficking.

How does the information you've learned today affect your understanding of why victims of human trafficking don't usually get out of their situation on their own?

DISCUSSION QUESTION:

Note to Student: People often call human trafficking an issue that is “hidden in plain sight” of a society that is unaware of its existence. It often looks different than what people imagine it to look like. Traffickers look different than we imagine, and victims look different than we imagine. This is why education is so important.

Compare the preconceived ideas you had about human trafficking to what you’ve learned today. Does what you’ve learned so far shed light on some of the reasons why human trafficking goes largely unnoticed in our country?
